

Following the promised line of video trailer releases, EA and DICE have released the Fault Line Episode 2: Good Effect On Target Trailer. This one follows a group of soldiers moving throughtout a rooftop to eliminate enemy targest while avoiding enemy snipers. Just like the first episode on the Faul Line Series, this video trailer showcases the great rendering of the Frosbite engine, blowing our expectations once again.

Worthy of mention are the effects that are created when bullets hit the walls close to the main character, and how at the end, after shooting an RPG, the enemy building breaks and creates a nice chain reaction.

The more we see of these videos, the more hyped we get about the release of this game, this fps is shaping up to be one of the best games so far, we are just hoping that the final result that will be released to the public will have as good graphics as these video trailers.

Fault Line Episode 2: Good Effect on Target Video Trailer

{jcomments on}