The final video for the Battlefield 3 series with twelve minutes of gameplay has been released today, If you have watched the three other trailers from the Faultline series, this last one will look very familiar. Over all we are very pleased with the final result and concur with DICE with their claim that the ANT animation technology and Frostbite engine is rendering beautiful graphics. Here is also the official text that accompanies the video:

Quoting:

"Watch 12 minutes of gameplay from Battlefield 3, featuring never before shown footage!

Join us as we follow Staff Sgt. Black and his team of U.S. Marines into the bad part of town, as they move to the rooftops to eliminate an enemy sniper in an abandoned hotel.

This in-game footage from Battlefield 3 shows off the ANT animation technology in all its glory and as the explosive finish to the Battlefield 3 Fault Line series draws near, Sgt. Black is tasked with disarming a home-made bomb, leading to first-person melee combat with the bomber and a large-scale firefight in the streets against massive opposition.

Now you can watch unseen footage from the Fault Line series in the full 12 minute video.

Battlefield 3 is in stores this Fall. Pre-order now and get classic Back to Karkand maps from Battlefield 2 for free."
